Policy Title:	Communication Guidelines
Purpose:
To outline what methods are to be used, and in what way, to effectively communicate between team members.
Scope:
These guidelines: • Apply to staff of this game development studio. • Cover approved communication mediums, including Microsoft Teams, email, and verbal communication. • Outline requirements for inclusive messaging, plain language, and Augmentative and Alternative Communication (AAC) principles. • Distinguishes routine correspondence from crisis communication, formal reporting, and marketing policies.
Definitions:

Policy statement:
This policy will determine the correct use of communication methods, as well as what information is to be disclosed on different platforms to ensure confidentiality is maintained.
Procedures:
• Verbal Communication should be utilised where appropriate – Ensure that you are in a private forum, and only engaging with people privy to the information being discussed. • Microsoft Teams should be used where verbal communication cannot be utilised – Private group chats will be organised with every team, and confidential information can then be shared and discussed. Ensure that when ending a session on Teams, that all accounts are signed out. • Email is to be used only as a means to communicate to someone who is unreachable by the previously mentioned methods. Emails should (in most cases) avoid overly confidential information, as it may be intercepted.
Related policies and procedures:
